[redacted] northwest of Svyatoy Nos, a submarine and two surface vessels were observed in a northerly direction. The vessels were on an easterly course at a speed about eight to ten knots, with the two surface vessels first in line and the submarine quite a distance aft and southwest of them. 50X1-HUM

Description: The submarine [redacted] had a large tower with gradations on the stern, a periscope or something similar at the middle of the tower. A thick tube issued at an angle aft on the after-side of the tower and branched out in two or three smaller tubes. At a distance of three nautical miles powerful engine-noises issued from the submarine. (See sketch, 50X1-HUM

[redacted]
The two surface vessels were identical. [redacted] 50X1-HUM

[redacted] The vessels had high forecastles, break down to the main deck aft of the bridge. The bridge had a mast with radar equipment just aft. There was one smokestack that was somewhat lower than the bridge-structure. There were guns on the forward and after decks. 50X1-HUM

[redacted] north of C. Teribyerka, one large and several smaller vessels were observed in a southern direction, just near the coast. The vessels maneuvered at slow speed and were on differing courses. [redacted]

[redacted]
the largest ship was a cruiser of the SVERDLOV class.

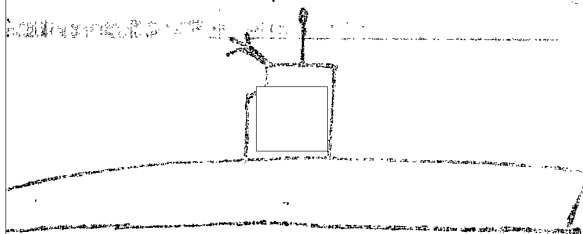

2. THE HARBOR:

[redacted] the wharf, a wooden platform laid down over four lighters chained together, was very poor and did not appear to have had any maintenance work done on it during the last few years.

[REDACTED] a Soviet naval body was observed at a position ten to twelve nautical miles northwest of Fruholmen. The force consisted of two destroyers and one cruiser that proceeded at line ahead in the order named. The observation distance was very great. At a distance, the cruiser resembled a "two-humped camel".

[REDACTED] at an approximate position N 69°35' - E 35°52', a submarine was sighted. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] on the Kildin Banks, two "destroyers" were seen engaged in shooting maneuvers. The vessels steered varying courses and each time they turned, guns were shot off. After an hour's absence in a northeasterly direction, the "destroyers" returned, accompanied by a third, larger vessel identified [REDACTED] as a cruiser.
